H S Baseball Team Wins 2 (

The Appomattox High School baseball team has had only 5 days of practice and lost its first game to Buckingham by a score of 8 to 7, but has returned to better playing and hitting this week and has won its last two district games.

In the Buckingham game, Appomattox outhit the visitors by a 9 to 4 margin, but costly errors helped the visitors score 8 runs without the ball leaving the infield. Raymond Ferguson was the losing pitcher for Appomattox.

Then on Monday, the high school team downed Rustburg in a district game by a 10 to 3 score. Raymond Ferguson allowed only five scattered hits and struck out 7 men. The hits were made by: Kinckle Martin, 3 hits; Raymond Massie, 2; Raymond Ferguson, 2; Glenn Morris, Dan Coleman, Terrell Martin, Richard Robinson, Toots Carter and Cecil Wooldridge, 1 each.

On Tuesday, the high school won its second district game without a defeat, by downing Amherst 7 to 1 behind the no-hit pitching of freshman Dickie Guill. Again, 6 errors by the home team kept the pitcher in trouble and allowed the only run to be scored by the visitors. The hits were made by the following boys: Dan Coleman, 2; Kinckle Martin, 2; Terrell Martin, 2; Raymond Ferguson and Richard Robinson, 1 each.

Parris Island, S. C. (FHTNC) George C. Smith, III, is congratulated by Lt. Commanding officer, 1st Lt. B. J. Ready, upon being selected "Outstanding Member" of his platoon and being promoted to Marine Private First Class March 25, during recruit graduation at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S. C.

Smith is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Smith, Jr., of R. F. D., Appomattox, Va.

"Outstanding Member" is an honor bestowed upon the man who most nearly attains the characteristics of an ideal Marine during 12 weeks of intensive training.

Before enlisting in December, 1957, Smith graduated from Fork Union Military Academy.

DON'T PLANT CORN TOO EARLY, FARMERS TOLD

Don't get over anxious when it comes to planting corn, Extension specialists advise. They warn that when corn is planted too early trouble may follow.

Low temperatures, especially during the period of seedling growth, will retard growth and cause plant troubles. Continued low temperatures at this stage cause a browning leaf tissue, depletion of food reserves in the plant, and blighting of the seedlings by soil-borne organisms. If the plant is not too badly damaged, it may recover when warm weather comes, and produce fairly well.

S. B. Fenne, plant pathologist at VPI, also points out that during the past several years many farmers planted corn when the ground was cold and wet. In some cases a few warm days occurred, causing the seed to germinate and the plants to appear above ground. However, if weather conditions remained unfavorable for a week or longer, these young plants frequently turned yellow and eventually many of them died. Farmers usually blame this condition on poor seed or weak germination, when the real culprit is cold, wet weather at planting time or during the following two or three weeks.

Fenne says seed treatment with one of the recommended fungicides, such as Arasan, Barbak, or Orthocide, will help protect the seed and young seedlings for a short time. However, if unfavorable conditions continue too long, even seed treatment will not save the crop.

Best advice is to wait until the ground warms up enough to permit normal growth of corn. This usually is about 10 to 15 days after the last killing frost of the spring.
